

Child to Parent Violence One Day Workshop

CPV has emerged significantly as an issue for families in the UK over the past five years. This workshop is specifically aimed at practitioners working with families where children are being abusive towards their parents or who currently appear to be out of parental control.

Who should attend: Those working in domestic abuse agencies, probation, youth offending, health, therapeutic services, legal services, Citizens Advice Bureaus, education, community groups, housing, police, social services, early help teams, youth services, adoption & fostering services.

Benefits of attending:

- To increase understanding of the reasons that CPV can happen
- Dispel the myths surrounding CPV
- Explore approaches to working with parents experiencing CPV
- Tips & Tools to support parents

Workshop includes: Introduction to CPV including national context and an overview of the Who's in Charge? approach, how to identify CPV as opposed to other forms of familial abuse, how to discuss CPV in the face of shame & embarrassment, impact of differing parenting styles for parents of uncooperative children, supporting parents to develop creative consequences, empowerment of parents.

Trainers: Carole Williams is a qualified social pedagogue, parenting specialist, trainer, life coach and foster carer and has worked with in excess of 1000+ parents. Trained in a wide range of parenting and domestic abuse programmes.

Cathy Press has 20 years experience as a therapist specialising in domestic & sexual abuse related issues and has developed and delivered multi-agency training for 14 years, both in the UK and internationally as well as training facilitators in the Freedom Programme and Escape the Trap, focusing on teenage relationship abuse.

Carole & Cathy have spent the past 6 years leading and developing the Who's in Charge? programme and were fore-runners in developing the first UK conference addressing Child to Parent Violence in 2013.
